BOWLING

Time has come for Moore's HOF induction

KATHY FRANKE
BOWLING

What began as a job at Apple Valley Lanes 22 years ago developed into a life-long passion for John Moore and culminated in his induction into the Door County USBC Hall of Fame.

"It was a surprise," he said. "I knew I had the qualifications. It was just a matter of when."

New to the game in 1995, he readily acknowledges that his employers, Pat and Sandie Cuculi, taught him the fundamentals.

"Pat taught me how to throw the ball and Sandie taught me how to do the approach," he said. "I just changed the style a bit as the years went on."

Coming in each day an hour before work to practice increased Moore's first-year 148 average to 192. He eclipsed the 200 average mark in the 2001-02 season and has since maintained a steady 200-plus, posting a personal high of 217.

Among his several league championships, he has a career-best series of 776 and three perfect games.

He consistently finishes in the top five in the County Tournament, including second place in the singles, doubles and team events the same year he won his all-events title. A 700 series in the State Tournament singles event notched him a top 12 finish.

Facing similar challenges competing in golf and softball helped him to control his frustration at missing spares during his early years.

"Once the ball leaves your hand, you have no more control over it," he said. "Nowadays I don't get as mad when I miss them. If I make a bad shot, I know I have to correct myself."

Excitement aside, he is most moved that Hall of Famer Pat Cuculi will be presenting him.

"Working for him for 22 years and being a very good friend of mine and the one who actually taught me how to bowl," he said, "... it is very special."

Shepit has a few surprises in PBA regional

KATHY
BOWLING

This is the second in a two-part interview with Aaron Shepit, who bowled in his first Professional Bowlers Association regional tournament over Labor Day weekend.

Shepit's first PBA regional started with two clean games before he fired a 297.

KF: How did you manage 297?

AS: (laughing) I have no idea. The other four guys I bowled with couldn't find anything. For some reason the shot just opened up enough and I was just accurate enough. I had a couple Brooklyns (a ball that hits on the opposite side of the player's normal pocket) in the first four frames, but after those every shot was in the pocket. On the final shot, I got it a tad wide and it just stayed out there. I left the 1-2-8.

KF: How difficult were spares?

AS: Single pins were the same for me as on a house shot. I throw straight at them and take the lane out of play. Multiple-pin spares were difficult. The ball slid too much going to the right side and hooked too much going left.

KF: What were your biggest challenges?

AS: Other than spares, and I did better on those than I thought I would, it was stringing strikes together. I did it the one game, but otherwise I didn't get the 230s and 240s like a lot of the other guys were able to do. I stayed in a pretty narrow window of 167-200. The 297 game brought me up and kept me in the top 20.

Towards the end of the fifth game, I was so mentally tired because of focusing on every shot. It's like coming out of a big test. So I lost it a little bit before I stepped it back up.

KF: What did you learn about your game?

AS: I was surprised at how accurate I was because I always had a question with that. I don't look at the arrows when I bowl. I draw an imaginary line from the pocket to my ball and focus in front of myself before I throw. It's a "feel" game for me. It felt good to know I can play at that level. Going forward, I'll be more prepared for the mental game. I didn't expect that part of it.

KF: Do you see yourself on the regional circuit?

AS: Not on a full-time basis, especially with my job (pilot) and family. Most are too far away. If they come to Chicago or Green Bay, I would definitely do another one. It was a great experience.

KF: How about the Senior tour down the road?

AS: I definitely would. I'd have more time to travel and the kids would be grown. You know, the PBA50 tour is only 12 years away for me!

Cater achieves dream with Bowler of Year honor

Jacob Cater spent his eight years of junior leagues admiring and “watching all the bowlers before” him, like the late Adam LaLuzerne, Sam Oakley and his brother, Nick.

“I just always wanted to be like them and get the award like they did,” he said.

His name now joins theirs as the newest Junior Bowler of the Year.

This past season, Cater increased his average from 186 to 200, a personal best, and rolled a 257 high game and 699 high series. In the high school league, he held the high average for boys, was a member of the league-champion Sevastopol team and bowled in his fourth consecutive State All-Star tournament.

He credits his early youth coaches, Sandie Cuculi and Kathy Franklin, for helping him with his game, but readily admits the huge influence of his father, Todd, one of the area’s best bowlers.

“Not once did he get on us for not bowling well,” he said. “He always wanted us to do better and to have fun.”

Of his many accomplishments, finishing second in the 2015 State team event was his most memorable.

“That was fun,” he said. “And it was a big deal. There were bowlers from nine different regions of the State competing.”

His fondest memory, though, is of him as a freshman and his brother a senior bowling together as All-Stars.

“I was really nervous. It was overwhelming,” he said. “Just knowing that was it for him at the time and hoping he had a good time.”

Cater continues working at mastering the game’s finer points like increasing ball speed and changing his approach, but his biggest thrill is when the effort pays off.

“When you’re bowling good,” he said. “It seems easy. That’s always a fun feeling.”

BOWLING COLUMN

Dix amazed by Door County bowling Hall induction

Scott Dix experienced the "biggest shock" of his 28-year bowling career when he was notified of his induction into the Door County USBC Hall of Fame.

"It's an unexpected honor. Just amazing," he said, still in happy disbelief. "I couldn't quit smiling for two or three weeks."

Dix began bowling in 1989, averaging 178 in an every-other-week couple's league, but soon joined multiple leagues in addition to subbing. He broke the 200-average mark in the 1999-2000 season, recording his personal high of 225 last season and has a 300 game and 818 series.

He owns a singles and team title in the county tournament, and has cashed in the State Senior doubles event, as well as making a match-play appearance in a Wisconsin

Scratch Bowlers Tour stop, where he was a regular competitor.

A self-taught student of the game, Dix learned the fundamentals by watching the Pro Bowlers Tour and other bowlers, incorporating styles he liked into his own. As he gained proficiency, he worked on consistency. But his hardest lesson was mastering the mental game, learning to "take the emotion out of it."

"Where I really learned to bowl was the WSBT," he said. "Because you're jumping pairs (of lanes) and you're bowling for money. It's costing you. You better do something."

Bowling fuels his competitive spirit and for him is "absolute competition."

"It's a playing field where I can compete with virtually everyone," he said. "I can't beat everybody, but I can run with them."

Even though his primary focus is now on his grandchildren, Dix still looks for another 300 game and 800 series.

"Nothing's been the end," he said. "I just like to bowl. I don't think I'll ever quit bowling."

Polcen emotional with Bowler of the Year honor

“I started out with the bumpers,” Chloe Polcen said. “And I just fell in love.”

At 17 now, with 10 years under her belt, a high average of 160, high game of 240 and high series of 541, Polcen rolled her way to the girls Junior Bowler of the Year.

“This is so big,” she said emotionally.

“After I found out, I was actually crying. I never thought I could be that person to ever get it.”

She credits her parents, Rose and Don, with teaching her to bowl and admires her coach, Hall of Famer Tim Jutila. But it's her grandfather, Jon Beilfuss, who's her biggest supporter.

“I like to tell him everything,” she said.

While she's had to curtail her bowling this year due to an unrelated injury, she normally practices every week, working on different parts of her game. Being a very visual person, she uses written references to aid with finding her mark and making adjustments, her most challenging fundamentals.

“If you don't find your mark,” she said. “You're done.”

Her biggest moment had been stringing six consecutive strikes for her personal high game, but then she quickly added making the High School All-Star team for the first time last season where she scored a high game of 220 in the team event.

“The lanes were hard, but different,” she said. “And we had to move lanes each game. I was actually proud of myself.”

Her face lit up at the prospect of being an All-Star again.

“I'm going for it,” she said. “I'm gonna get a 300!”

Besides having fun with her friends, bowling gives her competitive spirit an outlet that may have started a bit of a family rivalry.

“I gotta be better than my mom!” she said with determination.

BOWLING

U.S. Open, U.S. Women's Open close out amateurs

The U.S. Open is the pinnacle of the four majors that include the Masters, Tournament of Champions and PBA World Championship. Its long format is a grind made to test the skills and endurance of professionals and amateurs alike.

But in March, that open-door policy swung mostly closed when the United States Bowling Congress and the Bowling Proprietors Association of America decided to revamp the Open to "enhance the event's integrity and prestige." The U.S. Women's Open has now followed suit.

KATHY
FRANKE
BOWLING

Both tournaments will now have guaranteed prize funds, but have been changed to "invitation only" along with limiting entries to 144 competitors for the Open and 108 contestants for the Women's Open.

In addition to previous U.S. Open champions, bowlers are invited based on the previous year's performance in the PBA/

PWBA money/point list, USBC Masters/Queens, USBC Open Championships (nationals), World Bowling Tour, Zone Championships, PBA Regionals, Intercollegiate sectional qualifiers, Junior Gold championships, Team USA and Junior Team USA.

An on-site qualifier fills remaining spots with a maximum of 80 for the Open and an indeterminate number for the Women's Open.

What I like about the change is limiting the competition to using a set 24 lanes for the entirety of the tournament. All competitors bowl on the same lanes from fresh oil to burn to double-burn (no oiling between rounds).

The new format also offers smaller centers the opportunity to host the event, allowing greater flexibility in scheduling at more varied venues.

I don't like the "invitation only" approach or the performance-based criteria, although I do understand it. The PBA and PWBA already have champions and players only majors, which this too closely resembles.

It comes across as an effort to shut out amateurs by forcing them to make a costly trip to the host city for the chance of making it through a qualifier.

An "open" tournament should embrace being open to all touring and international players as well as amateurs. Diversity among entrants keeps the competition and the sport stronger and fresher.

For me, this change is too stuffy and elitist. And that's not an appealing image.
